

A Dangerous Pet

There was once a kingdom where two kids ruled. They had a bloodthirsty dragon who would eat anyone or anything. It would destroy cities just to eat one human, or one animal, just to even get the sensation of taste one more. It would even kill for limb, or a drop of blood.

One day a man, a mysterious man, ventured into the depths of the dragons chamber. He did this in attempt to seal the dragon for his own. This attempt went horribly wrong, the dragon awoke from its deep sleep, and it broke from its shackles. It blew steam from his nose and roared which echoed throughout the city as if it was hollow. The dragon raged, he flapped and flapped he was in the air. The man went to seek cover but in doing so, the dragon shot a fire ball as bright as a burning star right at him. He burned to a pile of black ashes. The dragon went around the city, mauling everyone limb from limb. It started to burn everything in its way.

But just when all hope seemed lost, two strange knights came to our rescue. They battled the dragon for hours on end, they eventually killed the dragon. They had a giant feast of meat, and the meat was the dragon.

A Dangerous Pet

The boy stared at the dragon with his pitchfork armed. He had placed 100's of small burning ashes over the sharp edges. He covered the ashes with pieces of meat so the dragon would think that it was dinner, fresh out of the furnace. The child stabbed the boiling metal into the dragons neck. The child's "Pet Dragon" had been terrorising the village for ages and ages. The creature created an awful squeal and fell down the long cliff to its death.

The town cheered in happiness as the dragon could no longer harm them. However another problem had arisen, the blazing ashes that the child had placed on the end of the fork had caused the tall grass at the bottom of the cliff to burst into flames. Suddenly the sky went grey like sadness appeared from nowhere. Thick heavy rain began to bucket down over the entire village, putting out the fire that was close to destroying the village.

Everything that happened before the dragons arrival, had finally been brought back to the village's peace.